"The best security blanket a child can have is parents who respect each other"

-Jan Blaustone

Dear Parents,

Another school year has been completed at Pen Ryn. It has been an exciting and rewarding year for your children. The teachers have continually utilized different teaching techniques to develop further learning concepts, as well as new learning experiences being instituted with the use of various skills programs at the different levels. The Parent Volunteer Program was again active and volunteered over 4000+ hours. The PTO sponsored many worthwhile and meaningful programs and raised over $45,000 to support our students.

It was the great lyricist, Oscar Hammerstein, who wrote, "June is bustin' out all over." All we have to do is look around us to realize how appropriate that line is. There is a spirit within each and every one of our students that longs to walk out under those trees, to smell those flowers, and to be a part of summer. This is how it should be. We are meant to enjoy life, and summer offers us opportunities we have at no other time of the year. Yet, it is also a time when we should see to it that our children pause for a moment to remember that they are completing another school year. And, while summer brings a momentary end to school, it does not bring an end to their education. Over the past ten months, your children have worked very hard at their studies and learned many things, which they did not know when school began. What they learned was the result of many factors, not the least of which was their effort in studying, writing, practicing, and the hours they put into classes, activities and discussions. Now that the school year has drawn to a close, I hope your children realize that their learning will continue, for all of life is a school, and we learn by everything we do. It is my sincere wish for you and your family that the summer may hold only pleasant experiences. Have a good summer!

Sincerely, Liz Morton

Congratulations

ANNUAL GIVING NEWS 2014-2015 Update

Thank you to all of the parents who contributed to our annual giving (The Pen Ryn Fund).

There is still time to help us meet our goal of 65% of our families contributing, in order for

The McMullen Family to contribute their donation of $25,000.

Another thank you to our Board of Trustees, faculty and staff for participation to the Annual Giving Fund.

A great big thank you to our current 2014-2015 givers! You make the difference!

Donations can still be made up until June 30, 2015, to go toward this year.

Outdoor Classroom

On Tuesday May 15, Pen Ryn with the help of Waste Management, broke ground on an outdoor classroom. This space will make learning a multi-sensory experience and allow more creativity.

SPEND THE DAY WITH THE OFFICE

On Friday May 15, our Auction winners spent the day in the office. Everyone had an opportunity to learn some office procedures as well as make some calendar changes (i.e.: announce a dress down day!). They were all treated to lunch at A-1 Japanese Steakhouse and then back to school to get a tour of some of the behind the scene areas of the building.

Thank you to the parents for giving your children this unique opportunity.

Fears of Raising 21st Century Children

No matter what stage we are in, as parents, we have to face our fears. If we don't deal with them properly, we can either become over-protective and stifling, or the opposite: nonchalant and careless. Overcoming these fears helps prevent poor parenting decisions. To help you face your parenting fears, here are some things that we think are critical.

1. Be cautious, not psychotic

As parents charged with the task of guiding our children through a sometimes hostile world, there is a fine line between healthy caution and virtual psychosis. Yes, there are all kinds of threats out there that we need to be aware of. But some parents get so worried that they micromanage their kids' lives. This breeds children who are scared to take risks and incapable of standing on their own two feet. At the same time, the paranoia cripples the parent every time their kids are out of their sight. You can't take the risk out of life. Even if you could, would you really want to? The most important lessons are often learned through disappointments and bad experiences. What you can and should do is take reasonable precautions. For example, rather than saying, "No trampolines, no toboggans," show your kids how to play with these things wisely and safely. Instead of scaring them into never talking to strangers, help them learn how to observe people and watch for warning signs. Instead of forbidding them from getting their driver's license, teach them how to drive carefully. Talk, even caution them about threats, but don't immobilize them.

2. Educate yourself

Here's a principle to keep in mind: the more educated you are about the issues facing your kids, the wiser your decisions, the less you'll worry. Take the Internet for instance. We all know that the online world can be a dangerous place for kids if they aren't careful. The problem is, in many cases our kids know more about computers and the Internet than we do. We can't train them in Internet safety if we don't know how to use it ourselves. Plus, the problem is scarier to us if we don't fully understand it. The solution is to find a computer-savvy friend who can teach you how to use the technology and walk you through the pitfalls, so your computer will be safe at home. This applies not just to the Internet, but to every parenting fear you have. Knowledge puts your apprehensions into perspective and helps you to deal with any threat in a wise and productive way.

3. Talk freely with your kids

Once you've educated yourself, the next step is to take time to teach your kids. An informed child is the best defense against the many things that could potentially happen to them. The more the child knows about the dangers that exist and how to protect themselves, the safer they are. So coach them. Talk with them about the things they see in their world and give them the freedom to share their fears with you. As you walk through life with your children, you will have countless opportunities to train them in how to survive in this world. Don't let them get away. Of course, you also need to give them appropriate boundaries. There are some things they are unable to protect themselves from, and in those cases we must do it for them. Even then, though, it should be done in a context that enables them to learn the reasons for the rules so they can begin to develop their own boundaries, and so they'll understand how to deal with the situation if the boundaries ever slip. Help them develop a reasoned lifestyle, where they know why they do what they do.

4. Instill confidence, not fear

What kind of adult do you want your child to become? One who thinks the world is out to get them and is afraid to face the difficult situations that come their way? Or one who is secure and strong enough to survive the inevitable challenges life will bring? To most, the answer is clear. If you want your child to become strong, you need to develop their confidence. You must believe in them, affirm them and paint a strong future for them. Build in a tough attitude, one that says, "I'm going to be okay in this big, bad world. It's going to be alright. I know what's right, and I can say no." I'm not saying we want them to be arrogant, but we need to be empowering our kids. Instead of teaching them to be afraid of people, teach them how to look adults in the eye. Make sure they understand that it's okay to say "no" to things that make them uncomfortable. Help them learn to build their own boundaries, because the time will come when they are outside of your ability to protect them. When that time comes, you want them to have a sense of confidence that they will make it on their own.

5. Be a safe harbor

The last thing, and likely the greatest gift to our kids is this: we have to become our kids' safe harbor. Kids still need to be able to run home to Mom and Dad and find it a safe place. If their parents are not a safe place, where will they have to run to? They'll find somewhere or someone, and it's likely going to be a place or a person you don't want them running to. Mom and Dad, you've got to love your kids. Hug your kids often and tell them you love them. Give them the opportunity to tell you about your worries and fears. When they tell you they're afraid of something, don't downplay it. Don't question their fears, because they'll never come and talk to you about them again. Listen, understand, and then build their confidence. I can't stress it enough: when your kids come running home, they must be running to a safe place; a place where they feel they can come without fear of judgment; a place where Mom and Dad love them unconditionally. That's the greatest gift you can give to a kid in a scary world.
